

I write to urge the FCC to NOT create regulations requiring TV manufacturers to include copy protection features in their hardware or software.

American citizens enjoy clear and appropriate "fair-use" rights that permit copying of content for personal use. The proposed regulations effectively terminate those rights administratively. If these rights are to be abrogated this is a matter for the legislature to rule on directly.